

Environmental education for children

Der WWF is the world's largest and most respected independent conservation organization, active in more than 100 countries. 5,000 people worldwide are working on the conservation of the world's biological diversity and on footprint reduction. Supported will be WWF Austria's environmental education programme. Under the slogan "education for sustainable development" (ESD) the WWF environmental education program avows itself to a modern and sustainable environmental education - aiming to give kids and youth already at an early stage in their lives a better understanding of the environment and to convey personal responsibility. To achieve this goal, WWF Austria's activities range from the provision and distribution of educational material, school visits and further training for teachers, an e-learning platform to a variety of field trips, project days and holiday camps.

Project aim:

Production of an informative handbook for cross border education projects in Eastern Europe and establishment of a dedicated homepage for the WWF youth programme.